AMERICAN CONSUL KILLED AT BATOUM

Englishman by Birth, Engaged in Business There.

Address in Reply to Speech From the Throne Must Be Submitted to Ministers.

DOUMA PRESIDENT AGITATED.

Batoum, Russia, May 21.—W. H. Stuart, American vice consul here, was assassinated last night. Should it develop that the Russian government is in any way responsible for the assassination of Vice Consul Stuart by failing to provide proper protection, representations will be made by the state department through Ambassador Meyer to the Russian government.

Washington, May 21.—Vice Consul Stuart at Batoum who is reported as assassinated, was an Englishman by birth. He never was naturalized and was appointed to the position in 1904. His post was a minor one in the American consular service. There was no salary attached, the incumbent being paid fees. Stuart was engaged in business at the time of his appointment. He was permitted to continue at it along with his consular duties.

Parliament Upset.
St. Petersburg, May 21.—A bomb was thrown into the parliamentary camp by a note received by President Mouroumoff, of the lower house from Petroff, which instead of making an appointment for an audience at which he and the delegation could present an address in reply to the speech from the throne, contained the information that Emperor Nicholas would not receive the delegation and that the address must be presented through the ministry of the court.

President Monomastoff, instead of sending the address to Baron Fredericks, minister of the imperial house, immediately issued a call for a meeting of parliament at 11 o'clock today at which he will report the occurrence and ask for further instructions. A most heated meeting is in prospect.

After Ice Men.
Cleveland, May 21.—Indictments for violation of the anti-trust law were voted against thirteen officials of the ice companies in this city today. They are charged with having formed a combination for control of sales and with demanding exorbitant prices. Arrests will be made tomorrow.

GOOD EXAMPLE

SET CITIZENS BY IMPROVEMENT OF COURT HOUSE LAWN.

Judge Lightfoot Says He Expects to See Paducah a Beautiful City Soon.

Civic pride is fast manifesting itself in Paducah and it was fostered greatly by the example of County Judge Lightfoot and his board of magistrates in beautifying the court house yard. Since Judge Lightfoot removed the fence, planted flowers and trimmed the trees, besides making many other improvements at the court house, residents all over the city, who have watched developments, have begun to take pride in their lawns and are beautifying them. The move is not confined to any one particular section, but to the town at large.

"I notice that when one resident takes down his fence his neighbor will follow the example because it makes him take an interest in the appearance of his yard," Judge Lightfoot stated. "One resident is not going to let his yard go unattended when his neighbor is taking such an interest and I find this from my own experience. I took down my residence fence and began making lawn improvements. All my neighbors are doing the same, this all going to show the natural development in his work. I expect to see Paducah one of the prettiest cities in the state. We have the means to make it so and I am glad to see residents developing such pride. Clean lawns promote an inclination towards cleanliness in the premises generally, and in a year or two sanitation will be better as a result. The town cow or distance which made it possible for residents to remove fences and keep their lawns beautiful will be responsible for a general betterment of the city in health and otherwise."

Judge Lightfoot is making all improvements possible at the court house and will make the lawn one of the most beautiful in the state. He receives many compliments for the improvement made and appreciates that his efforts are bearing fruit.

INSPECTOR

HERE FOR KENTUCKY STATE BOARD OF UNDERWRITERS.

Wiring in Paducah Is Good and Mr. Gilsdorf Makes Some Comments—Knows Mr. McPherson.

William Gilsdorf, electrical inspector for the State Board of Underwriters, is in Paducah and today started his inspection work.

Mr. Gilsdorf formerly was electrical inspector for the city and is intimately acquainted with the condition here. During the past two months, however, the work has suffered as no inspector had been regularly employed. The matter will not have any effect on the rating, it is stated.

Mr. Gilsdorf came here from Kuttawa and stated last night that he noticed the Paducah Traction Co. had done a great deal of excellent work in overhead repairs. Mr. Gilsdorf was especially interested in the overhead trolley wire and electric feed wires and is pleased to see the company making the improvements.

"Wiring in Paducah is good, that is the greatest part of it, because I did part of it myself or rather saw that it was done right," Mr. Gilsdorf stated. "and I am glad to see an inclination among the property holders to make what repairs are ordered. The wire situation in Paducah has been serious and it was a hard pull to keep the work going right. I think now that merchants and property owners have become educated to the matter and will offer no hindrance to the inspector."

Inspector McPherson is said to be a first class man. Mr. Gilsdorf having been acquainted with him before he came to Paducah. Mr. McPherson is just off the Carnegie library "job" in Pittsburg, one of the biggest and most difficult jobs in the country, and is a thoroughly competent man.

TRAGIC MYSTERY OF THREE DEATHS

Was it Murder, Suicide Pact, or Duel With No Quarter.

Mark and Wes Wilson and Their Cousin Arthur West, All Shot in Store.

LYNNVILLE'S LATEST CRIME.

One of the most mysterious crimes ever committed in Graves county was brought to light Sunday evening about 5:30 o'clock when the dead bodies of Wes Wilson and Arthur West were found lying in pools of blood in Mark Wilson's store, in Lynnville, with the proprietor himself, unconscious and dying, within four feet of them. Mark Wilson expired without uttering a word, and not the slightest clue to the motive or manner of the triple homicide was to be gathered from the circumstances except that the revolvers of Wes Wilson and Arthur West, clutched tightly in their rigid fingers, told that these two had done the firing.

Ten shots were fired in all. These were distinctly heard by two men named Page and Poiner who found the bodies, and the accuracy of their hearing was borne out by the discovery of five empty shells in each revolver.

The testimony of Page and Poiner serve to further intensify the mystery of the tragedy. These two men with the Wilsons, who are brothers, and West, their cousin went to Mark Wilson's store Sunday afternoon. There is no liquor sold in Lynnville, and the witnesses stated that all three men were sober. Mark and Wes Wilson and Arthur West were in the best of humor when Page and Poiner left the store about 5:30 o'clock Sunday evening, according to the testimony of the latter. They had proceeded but a short distance when ten revolver shots in quick succession, emanating from the store, caused them to halt and turn back. They knew where the reports came from. When they entered the building by breaking in the front door they found the three men stretched on the floor, no two over three feet apart. The floor was drenched with blood. Wes Wilson and Arthur West were quite dead. The former had a bullet wound over the right eye and the latter a hole through his heart. Their deaths were instantaneous.

Mark Wilson was still breathing. The left side of his nose was shot away by a bullet that plowed its way straight into his head. Another leaden missile had passed just above his heart. Page and Poiner examined the men and, finding Mark Wilson alive, carried him out to the porch, where he died almost immediately.

The men were not gambling, drinking or quarreling. They could scarcely have started a quarrel in the short time elapsing between the departure of Page and Poiner and the shooting. The general belief is that the affair was in the nature of a duel and that Wes Wilson and Arthur West repaid to the store for the purpose of finishing each other.

It was within a short distance of the store that Walter McClain shot and killed his brother and John Carter a year ago. McClain was given eight years for the crime.

All three of the participants in this latest tragedy were married and leave families. Mark Wilson was about 30 years old; Wes was about 40 years old and Arthur West was between 30 and 40 years old.

The corner of Graves county is working on the case.

STEPS OFF TRAIN

And Then Commences Evolutions Not Down on Program.

Passengers aboard the Paducah-Cairo accommodation train Sunday morning were given an exhibition at Heath, Ky., a few miles west of Paducah on the Cairo extension of the Illinois Central. A negro woman carrying a basket stepped out of the colored coach at Heath just as the train stopped. She did not seem to be in any great hurry to leave the cars and waited until the train started.

While running at a rate of speed not exceeding ten miles an hour, the woman stepped off but overlooking the precaution of leaving the steps correctly. Instead of alighting firmly she hit her heels and started doing a circus stunt. She began to roll and after doing a couple of dozen turns down the hill, fell in a heap at the base of the hill.

The train was stopped, the crowd alighted and went to the old mammy's assistance, but she arose, brushed her face with her dress and waddled away. She refused to give her name to the conductor. She stated she was not injured and from indications escaped without any serious bruises.

SURPLICE

NO GARB FOR CHOR GIRLS, SAYS
BISHOP COADJUTOR.

Calls It an Abomination and Then Turns Attention to Processional Music.

Springfield, Ill., May 21.—Some of the recent utterances of the Episcopal bishop coadjutor of Springfield have stirred up a great deal of feeling in the course of his first address the bishop expressed himself very pointedly in regard to choirs and music.

"Here," said he, "I must confess that I am greatly troubled. I had not expected to find so many places, nine in all, where women and girls appear in church in the dress of men and boys. To me it is a very unpleasant sight, even though it may be picturesquely pretty. The thing is wrong in itself. 'Permit me to read one verse of holy scripture: 'The women shall not wear that which pertaineth unto a man, neither shall a man put on a woman's garments, for all that do so are abominable to the Lord.' (Deut. xxii, 5.) It is difficult to understand how with such words before us the custom of which we speak could be introduced."

"An abomination to the Lord in His own house! It has no sanction in the church; it is contrary to all ecclesiastical propriety, it is an invention of unthinking Protestantism, and in the Catholic church such practices should cease at once."

"Another thing we might well spare is the custom of universal and often tiresome processional and recessional hymns. A procession as an act of worship has its place in the service of the sanctuary where there is a proper choir to carry it out."

FORMER CITIZENS ARE COMING BACK

Will Attend the Home Coming Week in Louisville.

One Hundred and Fifty Former Residents of McCracken County Expected.

SOME WHO HAVE ACCEPTED

The plans for Home-Coming week in Louisville, June 13-17, are practically complete, and any one at all familiar with them will agree that they point to the largest gathering in the history of the South. The lowest estimate, based upon acceptance cards and letters on file at the headquarters of the Louisville Commercial club point to an attendance of over 55,000 Kentuckians. Only a small portion of this number indicated on their acceptance card the county of their birth.

Below will be found a list of former residents of this county who have accepted the home-coming invitation. This list by no means represents the attendance of those who went from this county. Practically every one accepting the invitation has stated that he or she will be accompanied by from two to five others.

The Home-Coming association at Louisville is informed that McCracken County will, according to its estimates, be represented by 150 former citizens during the big June event.

As the railroads have made a rate of one fare for the round trip from Louisville to all points in Kentucky, tickets going on sale June 16 it is expected that all former citizens of our county who visit Louisville, will come to their old homes as soon as they have partaken fully of Louisville's hospitality.

The following is the list referred to: Mrs. Millie Ann Holden, Mountain View Okla.; Edgar Wear, 619 Chau-bean avenue, St. Louis, Mo.; Jacob O'wnton, 456 South Eighth street, San Jose, Cal.; George Hendrick, 5190 Kensington, avenue, St. Louis, Mo.; John Johns, box 74, Libby, Mont.; J. Big Fred Miller and the "squeeze play" are responsible for yesterday's victory of the Indians over the Mud Wallers at Sportsman park in Cairo. The game was a goose egg affair until the eighth inning when the Indians began using their bunting sticks and tallying five scores by means of the "squeeze." Had Henry Wetzel wanted to field to home in the eighth inning instead of to first base, the Mud Wallers would have been whitewashed, but they were permitted to score once, this coming in the nature of a gift from the Warriors.

You could get anything you wanted in Cairo yesterday from an insult on down—except a bet. You could not meet a bet at even money. The Indians were lined up in full strength and the sports in Cairo would not bet against them. Gilligan and Nippert were in the game and the clock like regularity of the system was never broken.

Miller was in good form, the locals being unable to do anything with him. He shot balls around the neck, feet and in every style but they all looked like peas to the batsmen. The performance was witnessed by a well filled grand stand, the S. R. O. sign being out long before the game was called.

How It Happened.
In the eighth inning the Indians filled the bags and began having fun with the Mud Wallers. The locals were desperate to get the game and had tried every trick imaginable but to no avail. Parker tried once or twice to slide into Paducah basemen with his spikes, and several other tricks, not usually credited to Cairo, were tried. They all fell flat and when the bunting began and the Indians pushed score after score over the plate, the 1,000 visitors from Paducah gave a mighty cheer. A total of five runs was made during the inning and the lead at this stage of the game was too strong. The Cairo boys had little hope of catching up and the one run made after the eighth was a gift.

Once again the regular lineup of the Indians has been effected. With Gilligan and Nippert in the game the Indians will play perfect ball.

"Pap" Farabaker is still trying to figure Haas a "punk" hitter. Even if Haas did get but three hits out of ten times up in Cairo, it is hitting a great deal better than we expected to see him hit—in Cairo.

The writer visited Cairo Saturday night and Sunday. We saw "Pap" Farabaker and incidentally a few other things not on the program. It's the same old Cairo.
Bets were hard to get in Cairo yesterday. Paducah money went begging. It is said that the Tadpoles were afraid of Gilligan and Nippert who went in again yesterday.

Big Freddie Miller will now have only to get into the box when Cairo is played and the game is his'n.

Big Gas Range Demonstration

COMMENCING TUESDAY, MAY 22 FREE-- DELICIOUS BISCUIT AND EXCELLENT COFFEE SERVED ALL WEEK ==FREE COMMENCING TUESDAY, MAY 22

The feature of visibility on "Direct Action" Gas Ranges is one new and unique in stove construction. In a Direct Action Gas Range seven feet of gas will finish biscuits on BOTH RACKS. This includes heating oven and baking. DO YOU KNOW WHAT THIS MEANS? It simply means this: It is necessary with every other gas range to heat the oven for 15 to 20 minutes before baking is commenced--oven burners consume from 30 to 50 feet per hour--so therefore to get the oven in shape for baking it takes from 10 to 12 feet of gas.

IN THE "DIRECT ACTION"

With a consumption of seven feet of gas you can finish biscuits on BOTH RACKS. There is only one range that can do this and that is the "DIRECT ACTION."

NO HEAVY DEFLECTING PLATES. SO THE HEAT FROM THE BURNERS ACT DIRECTLY ON THE BAKING FROM THE MOMENT THE BURNERS ARE LIGHTED.

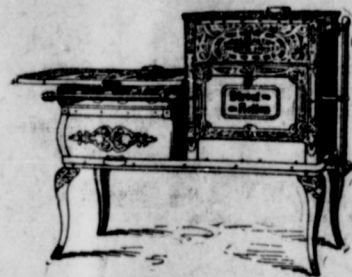

The biscuits are done before you would ordinarily begin to bake in the old way. Do you see the economy? The "Direct Action" will pay for itself in a short time.

ONE CENT'S WORTH OF GAS WILL HEAT THE OVEN AND DO A QUICK BAKING.

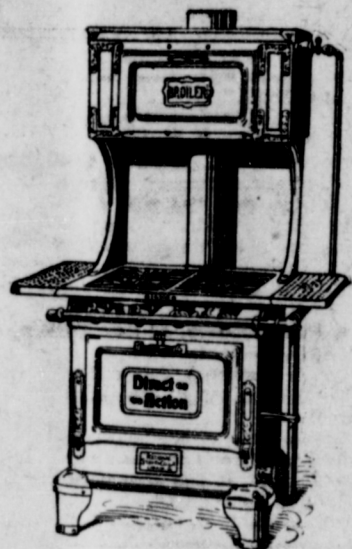

Oven fire in plain view when BAKING OR ROASTING. Don't have to be down on the floor when BROILING OR TOASTING.

ALL RANGES CONNECTED FREE

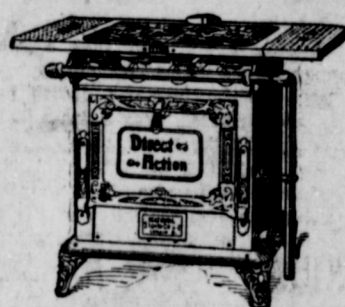

FIFTEEN DIFFERENT PATTERNS

How Does It Do It?

The answer is simple. It is all in the oven construction. Burners are right in with the oven, with nothing between them and the cooking.

Oven fire in plain view when BAKING OR ROASTING. Don't have to be down on the floor when BROILING OR TOASTING.

ALL RANGES CONNECTED FREE

NO HEAVY DEFLECTING PLATES. SO THE HEAT FROM THE BURNERS ACT DIRECTLY ON THE BAKING FROM THE MOMENT THE BURNERS ARE LIGHTED.

You put the baking right in the cold oven before or right after the flame is lighted. This seems unusual, don't it; but nevertheless it is so.

IN GRAVEL PIT

WILLIAM YOUNGHOOD BURIED AND CRUSHED TO DEATH.

Terrible Accident Near Wallace Park Saturday Afternoon--Funeral Yesterday.

William Younghood, 25 years old, the son of Thomas Younghood, of the Tyler neighborhood, was crushed to death by a landslide of gravel at the Exall pits half a mile beyond Wallace park, Saturday afternoon about 4 o'clock.

The young man was employed by Contractor Burton Gholson in road repairing, and was loading a wagon when the landslide occurred. A team with driver and helper was standing under a high embankment when the gravel loosened and came sliding down. One mule and Younghood were caught and buried. The young man's body was dug out a short time after the accident but life was extinct, the body having been horribly crushed by the tons of gravel.

The mule was dug out and saved. Coroner Eaker held an inquest Saturday afternoon, returning a verdict of accidental death, and the body was buried Sunday afternoon, interment at Mt. Kenton cemetery.

Had a Close Call.

"A dangerous surgical operation, involving the removal of a malignant ulcer, as large as my hand, from my daughter's hip, was prevented by the application of Bucklen's Arnica Salve," says A. C. Stickle, of Miletus, W. Va. "Persistent use of the Salve completely cured it." Cures cuts, burns and injuries. 25c at McPherson's drug store.

NOTES OF NEWS IN SUNDAY'S PAPERS

The employees of the Mogiana railway, which serves the principal coffee districts in the states of Sao Paulo, Brazil, have struck, and the trouble is now threatening to spread to all the railways of Sao Paulo.

Efforts are being made. It is said, by Hearst agents in Indiana, to have inserted a plank favoring municipal ownership, or at least approving public control.

A petition was filed in New York asking the closing of the poolroom near that place, operated it is said, by the Western Jockey club. It is alleged that the room is a public nuisance.

Miss Bessie Engleman was instantly killed by being struck by a train at a crossing in Lincoln county. Her cousin was seriously injured at the same crossing several years ago.

The Rev. D. M. Sweets, of Louisville, was appointed by the Presbyterian general assembly at Greenville as the Kentucky member of the committee on articles of agreement.

Vice President and Mrs. Fairbanks were given a day of strenuous entertainment Saturday by citizens of Atlanta. The program included luncheon, receptions and an automobile drive.

Results in the counties holding conventions in Tennessee Saturday largely increased Mr. Patterson's vote for the democratic gubernatorial nomination.

The forest fires in Northern Michigan have almost swept blank an area of 100 square miles. So far as known, only four fires have been lost. It is impossible to tell at present what the property loss will be, but it is very heavy. Four towns have been wiped off the map, a dozen partly destroyed and five counties devastated by the flames.

During the hearing of habeas corpus proceedings at Alexandria a clash occurred when an effort was made to swear Judge A. S. Berry off the bench. Three attorneys were fined for contempt, but refused to pay, and announced that they would not be intimidated.

The minority leader of the house, John Sharp Williams, of Mississippi, made his last stand Saturday in opposition to the bill paying the heirs of Samuel Lee $10,400 an allowance for the contest Lee made for a seat in the Forty-seventh congress.

The house Saturday by a vote of 107 to 66 refused to pass the anti-graft bill, so-called, dealing with cotton leaks and other matters of confidential character. The members resented the inclusion of representatives in congress within the scope of the measure.

The new Hamburg-American Line steamer Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, the largest passenger steamer afloat, completed her initial trip across the Atlantic. She brought to New York 490 saloon and 1,708 steerage passengers.

Made Happy for Life.

Great happiness came into the home of S. C. Blair, school superintendent, at St. Albans, W. Va., when his little daughter was restored from the dreadful complaint he names. He says: "My little daughter had St. Vitus' Dance, which yielded to no treatment but grew steadily worse until as a last resort we tried Electric Bitters; and I rejoice to say, three bottles effected a complete cure." Quick, sure cure for nervous complaints, general debility, female weaknesses, impoverished blood and malaria. Guaranteed by McPherson's drug store. Price 50c.

Daily Thought.

"All good thoughts and good actions claim a natural alliance with good cheer."

There is little significance in the establishment of a union labor bank in Chicago. If the title of the bank and the distribution of its stock will have a tendency to encourage thrift and economy on the part of members of the craft, the consummation of the idea will subserve a useful purpose, otherwise the institution lacks distinction. To be successful it will have to practice the same wise conservatism that promotes the prosperity of similar institutions. It is amenable to the same banking laws and the same financial condition. It can neither pay a higher rate of interest nor extend more general accommodations than its competitors without endangering its stability. Labor unions are organized for the accomplishment of a specific purpose, and when that object is fulfilled the organization endows the individual member with no attributes that distinguish him from any other good citizen. In certain relations in life he must meet each obligation just as a man must, who makes his living by the practice of medicine or law or by selling merchandise or manufacturing commodities.

While it was altogether commendable in the general council to enact an ordinance for the prevention of tuberculosis by making fumigation compulsory, it might be well for the board to inquire into the violation of the anti-spitting ordinance. The measure seems to have become a dead letter and the sidewalks are in a filthy condition in a number of places.

A Detroit jeweler is so accomplished in his art that he can get the alphabet and the numerals on a pin head. This feat may be deprecated by school teachers, when they consider some of the kinds of heads they have succeeded in getting the alphabet and numerals in.

President Palma, of Cuba, was inaugurated in the Red Salon, of the capitol. The auspiciousness of the occasion would be better appreciated in some far western states, if the ceremony had taken place in the Red Front saloon at the capitol.

Perhaps, some of this petty thievery and purse-snatching could be checked by enforcing a "go-to-work-or-get-out-of-town" order. The devil finds work for idle hands to do.

Let's see if it that all former McCracken county citizens visit Paducah in June. Their names should be furnished to the secretary of the Commercial club.

The Bloomer girls put up a good article of baseball, but it did not take the L. A. L.'s long to get onto their curves.

Paducah is infested with street beggars.

LARGE AUDIENCE
AT FIRST BAPTIST

Rev. Calvin W. Thompson Assumes His Pastorate.

Presiding Elder Fills Pulpit At the Broadway Methodist Church
—The Churches.

THE EPISCOPAL VISITATIONS

Rev. Calvin W. Thompson, D. D., the new pastor of the First Baptist church, filled his pulpit yesterday morning and evening. He was greeted by immense congregations at both services, the gallery and aisles being filled and people standing along the walls.

Dr. Thompson delivered two very strong sermons and showed himself a logical thinker and an eloquent speaker. In the evening his theme was "Why Will Ye Die?" and it was a broad comprehensive appeal to the reason of man.

Dr. Thompson arrived in the city Saturday morning from Denver, Col., to take charge of the church. His family will follow him later. He is being cordially welcomed by his people, and will be at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Edwards on North Fifth street until the parsonage adjoining the church is ready for occupancy.

Broadway Methodist.

The Rev. J. W. Blackard, D. D., presiding elder of the Paducah District Methodist churches, held the second quarterly conference round at the Broadway Methodist church, preaching morning and night. His morning theme was "Applied Christianity," and in the evening "The Ox That Pusheth With His Horns."

Both were forcible sermons, dealing with practical everyday living, and large congregations were present. Special music was rendered both morning and evening, and was very fine. Mrs. S. H. Winstead presided at the organ the morning hour. The offertory was sung by Miss Julia Scott, who has lost none of her charm of voice and expressive power during her year's absence in Los Angeles. Mr. Lee Garth of Union City, Tenn., sang very impressively at the close of the sermon.

Mr. Harry Gilbert played for the evening service, and rendered prelude—Berkley in opening. The offertory was sung by Mr. Lee Garth with fine effect. Mr. Garth has a voice of wonderful compass and power and was listened to with pleasure. He is a nephew of Mrs. V. O. Swatman of the city, and his parents formerly lived in Paducah.

First Christian.

Rev. W. H. Pinkerton filled the pulpit at the First Christian church yesterday morning, and was greeted by a large congregation. Dr. Pinkerton's popularity in Paducah always insures him a crowd. He delivered an earnest and practical exhortation. In the evening he spoke to the Young People's Society of the church.

The plan of the Episcopal visitation for the conferences of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, was arranged Saturday at Birmingham, The Memphis, Tennessee, Kentucky and contiguous conferences will be held as follows:

Second District—Bishop W. W. Duncan, Memphis, Ripley, Tenn., November 14, 1906; Alabama, Eufaula, Ala., November 4, 1906.

Third District—Bishop C. B. Galoway, Tennessee, Lebanon, October 3, 1906; Holston, Cleveland, October 10, 1906.

Fourth District—Bishop E. R. Hendrix, West Virginia, Huntington, September 5, 1906; Kentucky, Winchester, September 12, 1906; Louisville, Central City, September 19, 1906.

Last night Rev. B. W. Bass, of the Tenth Street Christian church, and Rev. J. W. Hudspeh, the Southwest Kentucky evangelist who has been assisting Mr. Bass in a series of meetings here, organized a church at the Christian mission in Mechanicshigh.

There were 37 members and much interest is being evinced in the work there. The revival which has been in progress there, closed last night, but will be begun again the first Sunday in June.

Both Mr. Bass and Mr. Hudspeh are now in Murray attending the church convention of their denomination in session there this week. Mrs. Bass will join her husband there tomorrow. The convention will close Thursday.

Third Street Church.

The protracted meeting in progress at the Third Street Methodist church is attended by great interest. The largest congregations in the history of the church were present at yesterday's services. The pastor, Rev. P. H. Fields, is being assisted by the Rev. W. A. Watts, of Lovelaceville, and the sermons were marked by much power yesterday. There were many requests for prayers at the service. This meeting will continue this week with the regular services day and night.

Meeting Begins.
Rev. W. W. Armstrong inaugurated a series of revival services at the Trimble street Methodist church last night. He will be assisted by the Rev. R. E. Brasfield of Barlow, and strong sermons were delivered yesterday. A the morning hour children's services were held.

The consecration of the three new bishops of the M. E. Church South yesterday at Birmingham, Ala., and was a most impressive ceremony. The sermon was preached by Bishop A. W. Wilson, of Baltimore, senior bishop of the church, who as orator and scholar stands without a peer in the college of bishops, and his sermon was a powerful force. The other members of the college participated in the ceremony. It is expected that the conference will adjourn with the three sessions held today.

Dr. E. B. Chappel, of Nashville, Tenn., who was elected to the office of Sunday school editor, is the father of Mr. Chappel who is here assisting Mr. Washington, city engineer, in the new street work. Mr. Chappel is a civil engineer from the Vanderbilt University.

The Illinois Central male choir, composed of employees of the Paducah I. C. shops, sang at the Trimble street Methodist Episcopal church Sunday.

While Americans take great pride and pleasure in being called "a strenuous people," it is perhaps not generally appreciated that a great many injure themselves physically—wreck nervous systems, invite premature wrinkles, gray hairs and infirmities by the hurry, worry way in which they live, neglecting in many instances proper care of the body and letting the real pleasures of life escape "as a forfeit." Unrestrained strenuousness means neurasthenia ultimately.

Neurasthenia is nerve-exhaustion and that means inefficiency of the body to carry on vital functioning. Nerve centres lag; debility ensues; listlessness and fatigue reign. Pain may be felt in the back; fullness or pressure at the top of the head; sleep is broken and without refreshment; digestion notably is weak and loss of appetite, constipation and distress after eating are the rule. The head-ach of neurasthenia is like a band around the head; ordinarily is worse in the morning and better towards the end of day, and is probably the most common of all headaches which come for treatment.

Now, drugs do not help neurasthenia; that is admitted; and physicians have long been accustomed to send their neurasthenics away from the cities to the mountains, seashore, abroad or anywhere to find new scenes and enjoy tranquil restoration. But that is expensive and there is a surer, quicker and better as well as less costly way—Osteopathy.

Osteopathy cures neurasthenia, which is but another name for nervousness, by stimulation to the nerves and the circulation.

I can show you to your satisfaction in a very few minutes why osteopathy is the same rational cure for ALL diseases of the nerves.

Come to see me at any time between the hours of 9 and 12 in the forenoon and 2 and 5 in the afternoon. Dr. G. B. Froage, 516 Broadway. Phone 1407.

H. K. Raine, a London artist, who paints in the dark has recently executed a portrait of W. P. Frith, R. A., for the next Royal Academy exhibition, London. "I have done it in five sittings," he says. "If I had done it in the light it would have taken double the time."

Sanitation Hints.

Good sanitation for 1906 should be your motto.

Clean your premises, keep them clean and sprinkle with lime.

Screen your doors and windows and keep out the house-fly, the most dangerous of pests. It carries disease and infection.

The most effective money spent in advertising Paducah will be that spent in cleaning and draining it. Every citizen can help to do this, in their own way.

No mosquitoes, no malaria. A clean city no danger of yellow fever and typhoid.

CORNERSTONE OF
NEW CAPITOLWill be Laid With Impressive Ceremonies June 16.

Tentative Draft of Program Announced by Frankfort Committee in Charge.

GOVERNOR TO WIELD TROWEL

Frankfort, Ky., May 21.—Plans for the ceremonies attendant on laying the cornerstone of the new capitol building June 16 are progressing rapidly under the direction of the Frankfort Business Men's club, and a tentative draft of the program already has been made.

The function will take place during the Home Coming week and it is expected that the excursion to the capitol will take an immense crowd. Invitation have been sent to many distinguished natives of Kentucky to attend and take part.

Several bands of music will be present and a parade to the capitol site will take place at 10:45 o'clock that morning. In the parade will be the entire state guard, civic and fraternal organizations, the speakers and state officials. Reaching the site a great chorus will sing "My Old Kentucky Home."

Dr. J. M. McClusky will invoke the divine blessing. H. V. McChesney, secretary of state, will speak on behalf of the capitol commission. Some son of Kentucky, who has won distinction in another state, will respond. For this honor the names of ex-Governor David Francis, of Missouri; Hon. John G. Carlisle, of New York; Justice John M. Harlan, and ex-Senator William Lindsay, of New York, have been suggested.

Governor Beckham will make a short address and lay the cornerstone.

The foundation of the building is completed and work on the concrete floor has begun. It will accommodate 1,000 people by June 16.

Paducah	10.1	0.9 fall

The river fell 1.8 in the last 48 hours, the gauge registering 10.1 this morning. Weather clear.

The several excursions yesterday on the river were fairly well patronized. The competition among three boats made the crowds on none of them extraordinary. The Dick Fowler and Louisiana went to Cairo, and the Cowling made two trips to Metropolis and one to Joppa.

The Joe Fowler got in here Sunday and laid over until today at 11 o'clock, leaving then for Evansville. The Clyde will arrive late tonight or early in the morning from the Tennessee river, lying over here until Wednesday evening at 6 o'clock before starting on the return trip.

The Louisiana left today at noon for Evansville to remain all summer running excursions out of that place. It will probably return here in the early fall to fill several prospective dates.

The Dick Fowler left on time this morning for Cairo despite the extra trip yesterday.

The City of Salt Lake is expected out of the Tennessee river tonight on the return trip to St. Louis.

The Savannah was due from St. Louis bound for Waterloo, Ala., this morning and will get here probably later in the day.

The Buttorff arrived last night and left early this morning for points farther down the river to deliver freight. It left at noon for Clarksville, Tenn.

New Orleans roustabouts are demanding $90 a month and "all day" receiving $3 per day, and an extra day's pay for labor not performed. Boat owners refuse to pay it.

Mr. Charles Franks and Mr. P. G. Hiddgeson, of Salem, O., are on the way here from above, in a 22 foot steel boat. They are on a pleasure trip of 5,000 miles by water. They will go down the Ohio and up the Mississippi through the canal to the Great Lakes, cruising over three of them. The boat is a six horse power and runs 20 miles an hour.

Released by Lloyd.

Ames, Wilgus and M. Miller, the first two pitchers, and latter right fielder, came home last night, having been released. Miller went home to Toledo, O. today. It is stated that Lloyd will get Gus Bonner back, the Dago having telegraphed here for a position on the team. He is now in the South Atlantic league. It is stated that Lloyd will get another fast hitting outfielder.

Municipal Ownership As It Prevails in Great Britain.

In the Journal of Political Economy for May, which is to come out this week, is an exhaustive examination of the methods and results of municipal ownership in Great Britain, made by Everett W. Burdett, of the Boston bar.

The importance which the subject of municipal ownership has assumed in this country is pointed out by Mr. Burdett by reference to recent events in view of which, he says, "no one interested in either the safety of private capital or the efficiency of municipal administration can close his eyes to the fact that a great socialistic agitation is upon us, which may result in far-reaching economic changes."

"Never has a wiser and a saner treatment of those public questions, which most nearly touch the individual—namely, those arising in and which concern the municipality in which he lives and labors—been demanded than here and now," Mr. Burdett continues. "We must treat those who are temporarily dazzled and misled by the glittering generalities of socialistic and quasi-socialistic doctrines with patience and respect."

In such a situation a clear and correct understanding of the truth about the actual results from municipal ownership is of the utmost importance to every American citizen. The experience of Great Britain being most frequently cited as indicating what the experience of America would be, Mr. Burdett went to England last summer and gathered exhaustive information for his report. Briefly stated, his conclusions are that municipal ownership and operation of public utilities in Great Britain has been only partially successful at the best, and has failed in many of the very respects for which its supporters here claim most and that, so far as the present status in Great Britain is desirable, it is owing to the conditions which do not exist and cannot be duplicated in America.

The first municipalized industry Mr. Burdett considers is that of furnishing light. The conclusion is drawn that, taking it for granted that the municipalities of England and Scotland have, on the whole, succeeded measurably in furnishing a fair article at a fair price, there is a slight difference in favor of the consumer in the results obtained from municipal as contrasted with private lighting plants. The success of these city undertakings is confined to this single feature, however, resulting solely to the benefit of comparatively few consumers and not to that of the general public. But against the one advancing municipal lighting seems to afford, Mr. Burdett sets other consequences of civic ownership and operations which are of a most detrimental character.

Restricts Industry.

Perhaps the most serious of the consequences is the hampering and restriction of industry. The backwardness of the development of electrical enterprise in England led to such a state of things that in 1902 the council of the institution of electrical engineers appointed a committee to investigate conditions and suggest action that would assist the industry. The committee's tabulated conclusions showed that the United States, with less than double the population of Great Britain, has six times the amount of apparatus installed for furnishing electric light and power, sixteen times as much for electric traction, twenty-three times as many miles of electric railways, twenty-six times as much money invested in such enterprises.

Next to absolutely restricting industry, municipal ownership shows its evil effects, Mr. Burdett declares, in the discouragement of private investment. "Without private capital and skill new industrial enterprises do not receive that impetus and development which they otherwise would. Private initiative is always necessary. Public officials do not invent, exploit, or develop new things, but leave the field of discovery, invention and development to private persons actuated by the hope of large rewards. Whatever may be the result of the prosecution by the public or its representatives of an enterprise which has been founded and put on its feet by individuals, it is doubtful if any case of successful municipal initiation of such an enterprise can be cited."

Mr. Burdett cites many interesting cases of municipal and private competition, in which the service afforded by public authorities seems invariably to be inferior, out-of-date and inconvenient. To quote a single paragraph: "A striking illustration of the results of municipal and private competition is furnished in the city of Sheffield. There the private gas company supplies good gas at so low a price that the city cannot afford to light its own streets by electricity, although it has a municipal electric plant, which has cost about $4,000,000. And the gas company earns and pays a dividend of 10 per cent upon its capital."

The Financial Results.

On the whole, it appears that the financial results from municipal operation of public services in Great Britain are unsatisfactory. The official returns for the electric lighting undertakings of the kingdom, for instance, to December 31, 1904, show that 58 per cent of the municipal plants produced a profit, the average being $4,320 per plant, while 42 per cent made absolute losses. On the other hand, of the privately owned plants ninety-two per cent made an average profit of $45,126 each while only 8 per cent showed a loss. The government telephone lines for the year ending March 31, 1905, showed a loss of $637,600, while the loss on government telegraph lines in the same period was $4,497,000. "In cases of loss in the prosecution of a municipal business," Mr. Burdett, pertinently remarks, "of course, the non-consumer, being a rate-payer, must stand the brunt, in the form of increased rates. He has been made an involuntary partner in an enterprise not established for his benefit and from which he can derive no advantage except in the form of profits, if any are realized, and must bear the losses if there are no profits."

The creation of a large and ever-increasing class of office-holding voters and the tremendous increase of municipal indebtedness and taxes are obvious objections to municipal ownership and are among its very serious results in Great Britain. The natural effect is that the character of men who are willing to assume the responsibilities of public office is becoming lowered from its previous high standard. It is generally recognized that the local governing boards of the larger British towns and cities, are becoming less, rather than more, efficient; and the multiplicity of their duties has grown to be such that they are, in some cases, fairly swamped with the extent and variety of the public concerns which engage their attention.

General Conclusions.

Mr. Burdett's general conclusions are that, even if one disagrees with him as to the character of the results achieved by municipal ownership in Great Britain, it would be impossible to duplicate them in this country, owing to the totally different political conditions which have produced there a much higher grade of legislative and executive local officials. "Not only is the municipal civil service in Great Britain totally different from that of America," he says, "and dependent for its character and tenure upon a wholly different system of laws and administration but the public sentiment and education of the people of the two countries upon the subject is so opposed that the conditions in either country could not be reproduced, by legislation or otherwise, in the other."

"In view of all the foregoing considerations, it is manifest that the continued encouragement of the exploitation of private business by private capital, rather than the entrusting of business or quasi business enterprises to municipal officials, is the only sound course to be pursued in the United States."

Glasgow, with all its boasted progress toward the millennium of municipal ownership, has a total of only 148 miles of municipal railway which is less than one-third of the mileage of the company which serves the city of Boston, though the Scotch city has a larger population than the American. The population per mile of track in Glasgow is two and a half times greater than that of the Boston system; yet Glasgow refused to consent to have private capital connect the city with several important suburbs by building eleven miles of track. According to the census of 1901 more than a third of Glasgow's 760,000 people live in one or two room tenements, each tenement housing from three to 12 persons—a condition Americans would consider intolerable.

J. R. Womble, of 1005 South Fourth street, carpenter by trade, says: "For six years itching hemorrhoids were the bane of my existence. During the day when overheated I suffered and at night my rest was disturbed. I tried everything about which I read or which friends and acquaintances advised me to try, still the hemorrhoids existed. The first application of Doan's Ointment procured at Alvey & Liel's drug store gave me relief. After the second day's treatment I slept the succeeding night like a child. It is nearly three months since I stopped the use of Doan's Ointment and there has been no sign of a return. FEW DESERTIONS FROM THE SCHOOL

Plan by Which Great Trouble Is Overcome in Paducah

Majority of Grammar Graduates Enter High School and Continue Course.

BY A SIMPLE EXPEDIENT.

A problem which has been bothering school men in cities had been overcome by the Paducah school authorities. It is the question of how to keep pupils from leaving the schools after grammar grades have been finished and the pupils promoted to the High school. In many cities a great number of pupils quit, in fact, more than half, before the High school is reached. The problem was solved in the Paducah schools and the result is clearly seen this year.

"The way we arrange to overcome this inclination, which is noticeable particularly in city schools," Superintendent Lieb stated this morning, "is to merge so gradually that it is not noticed by pupils."

"In grammar grades the pupils learn to love the individuality of the single teachers, but when the High school is reached there are six teachers, and all is new. The individual teacher is lost from the pupil and he has to seek interest in his work. This condition generally causes some pupils to quit before getting well into the higher department but by making the grades merge so gradually that it is not noticed in the work, we have overcome this inclination of pupils to quit school with graduation from the grammar grades."

"This year we have few to leave the grammar grades and no go into the High school. It is a result, that we feel proud of, and for which we have worked hard."

It has been proved beyond a doubt that incubators were in successful operation among the ancient Egyptians. These original hatching machines were about nine feet high, and were arranged with galleries for holding the eggs, which were hatched from a central oven. About 400 incubators have been discovered in Egypt.

The royal families of Sweden, Spain and Italy own lots in New York as well as Kaiser Wilhelm, who has also been a heavy investor in Western property, while King Edward purchased a piece of New York property from his mother and owns some thousands of acres of Western lands.

BILL IS CERTAIN TO PASS HOUSE

Hepburn and Cannon in Favor Senate Rate Measure.

President Now Will Turn Attention to Panama Canal and Hurry the Plans Along.

NEWS OF NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Washington, May 21.—The house will put through the rate bill without much loss of time. The house conferees may "chew the rag" for a few days; to be in the fashion, but there is no inclination on the part of the leaders of that side of congress to balk at the changes made in the Hepburn bill since it left them. Representative Hepburn himself said today that although his pet measure had been somewhat disfigured while in the senate ring, it was still recognizable, and there was at least the satisfaction of knowing that a rate bill had gone through. Speaker Cannon exhibited a spirit of approval of the senate bill as it had gone back to the house, although he said that he had not read it.

Now for Panama! The canal is to receive the concentrated attention of the administration from this time on. Rate legislation of a character that is thoroughly satisfactory to President Roosevelt, and therefore to the friends of the principle involved, has been insured, and with this matter out of the way the subject of the big isthmian water way is to take precedence over the important things that have commanded attention since the opening of the present congress. Without loss of a day's time, steps have been taken to carry the program into effect.

Japs Want Tobacco.

Of particular interest to the tobacco growers of Kentucky and Tennessee is the latest Japanese invasion of the United States by one Mr. Abe of Tokyo, tobacco expert and government investigator. The Jap must have his smoke, and he particularly likes American tobacco, large quantities of which he now imports. But in the island kingdom tobacco is a government monopoly and the mikado is therefore anxious to see the imports cut down, and the home production of this fragrant weed increased. For this reason Mr. Abe has been sent to this country to investigate our methods of growing tobacco, and these investigations, if successful, will result in a marked decrease in the exports of American tobacco to Japan. The Japanese expert, who is conducting his investigations at the Department of Agriculture, has made no secret of his mission, declaring that the failure of Japan to raise sufficient tobacco is due to the fact that its product lacked the pleasing aroma characteristic of the American product. He is now determined to discover a method of attaining this aroma. The Department of Agriculture is becoming somewhat alarmed over the menace to American tobacco growers and exporters which this investigation contains, to say nothing of those being carried on by officials of France, Spain, Italy and Austria. Its officials rightly fear that these countries, taking their methods from the United States, may curtail the exportations of American growers. To counteract this danger, there has been incorporated in the agricultural appropriation bill an amendment providing for an investigation with the view to improving the trade conditions in this staple in foreign countries. So after all, the investigations of Mr. Abe of Tokyo, instead of proving harmful to Southern tobacco growers, should prove of real benefit to them.

There is one place on the face of the earth where Carrie Nation would have no chance to use her hatchet, according to a consular report received at the State Department. That place is the city of Adrianople, in Turkey. In it whiskey is unknown. This beatific state of affairs the report naively attributes to the fact that there are no English or American residents, so that the people have as yet had no chance to take up the white man's burden.

The spectacle of a multi-millionaire asking congress for an increase of $4 a month in his pension was afforded congress this week. The Croesus who believes that his military record would be the brighter for the luster of additional government gold is Dr. E. E. Beeman, the chewing gum manufacturer. He has been receiving $5 a month, and asks that it be increased to $12. While he does not claim Cleveland as his home, his address is given to the Pension Office as the Century club in that city, an organization maintained by some of the Ohio city's wealthiest men. No explanation is vouchsafed by Dr. Beeman why he needs this additional $4 a month.

After much mental travail and nights of anxious thought, the comptroller of the treasury has handed down a weighty decision concerning coins to the amount of $39.66 which were placed in the cornerstone of the House of Representatives office building recently. G. W. Evans, special disbursing officer for the Interior Department, was undecided whether to honor the voucher of Superintendent Landis of the Philadelphia mint, because there was no special appropri-

DIED SUDDENLY OF HEART DISEASE.

How frequently does a head line similar to the above greet us in the newspapers. The rush, push and strenuousness of the American people has a strong tendency to lead up to valvular and other affections of the heart, attended by irregular action, palpitation, dizziness, smothered sensations and other distressing symptoms.

Three of the prominent ingredients of which Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is made are recommended by some of the leading writers on Materia Medica for the cure of just such cases. Golden Seal root, for instance, is said by the UNITED STATES DISPENSATORY, a standard authority, "to impart tone and increased power to the heart's action." Numerous other leading authorities represent Golden Seal as an unsurpassed tonic for the muscular system in general, and as the heart is almost wholly composed of muscular tissue, it naturally follows that it must be greatly strengthened by this superb, general tonic. But probably the most important ingredient of "Golden Medical Discovery," so far as its marvelous cures of valvular and other affections of the heart are concerned, is Stone root, or Collinsonia Can. Prof. Wm. Paine, author of Paine's Epitome of Medicine, says of it: "It is no long since had a patient who was so much oppressed with valvular disease of the heart that his friends were obliged to carry him upstairs. He, however, gradually recovered under the influence of Collinsonia medicinal principle extracted from Stone root, and is now attending to his business. Heretofore physicians knew of no remedy for the relief of so distressing and dangerous a malady. With them it was all guess-work, and it fearfully warned the afflicted that death was near at hand. Collinsonia unquestionably affords relief in such cases, and in most instances effects a cure."

Stone root is also recommended by Drs. Hale and Ellingwood, of Chicago, for valvular and other diseases of the heart. The latter says: "It is a heart tonic of direct and permanent influence."

"Golden Medical Discovery," not only cures serious heart affections, but is a most efficient general tonic and invigorator, strengthening the stomach, invigorating the liver, regulating the bowels and curing catarrhal affections in all parts of the system.

action made by congress for this amount. In despair he turned the matter over to the Comptroller of the Treasury. That official has just placed his seal of approval on the expenditure, and both Mr. Evans and Superintendent Landis may now possess their souls in peace. Comptroller Tracewell declares the amount may be taken from the appropriation of $980,000, made by congress for the creation of the structure. The time-honored custom of stuffing cornerstones with odds and ends of bric-a-brac, coins and old newspapers now having been legalized by the governmental "O. K.," the country can draw a long breath once more.

VALUE OF HORSE ON THE INCREASE

Automobile Has Not Entirely Supplanted Animal.

Number Has Increased Four Million in Ten Years and Aggregate Half Million Dollars.

OUR USEFUL DOMESTIC BEAST.

A few years ago the trolley car began to displace the horse car. It soon became manifest that the displacement would become general. Many were led to anticipate the downfall of the horse, or, at least, a great decline in the value of horses, owing to their banishment from one field of usefulness. A little later came the automobile. It has commenced taking the place in the city of draft horses as well as of the carriage horse. That led to predictions that the day of the horse was over and that the raising of them would be a decaying industry.

The horse refuses to go, and his value has advanced. On January 1, 1897, there were 14,364,000 horses in this country. On the first day of 1906 there were 18,718,000. In nine years there has been an increase of 30 per cent. The gain in the number of mules has been great, but not so large. In 1897 there were 2,215,000. This year, notwithstanding the heavy purchases made by the British government during the Boer war, there are 3,400,000.

The increase in the valuation of these animals is more surprising than in their numbers. The total value of horses has advanced from $452,600,000 to $1,510,000,000, and of mules from $92,300,000 to $234,600,000. It is hard to explain such an advance in values, except on the theory that the valuation in 1897 was too low or that for 1906 a little inflated. Even after making all allowances it is manifest that the value of the horse and mule has not been affected by the introduction of improved modes of locomotion.

One may rest assured that the 18,700,000 American horses are not eating their heads off. Those that are old enough are employed on the farms and in the city. The supposition that horse power might be supplanted by electric power was not well founded. There is so much work to be done in the United States that both kinds of power are needed, and probably always will be.

Saddle Horses at the Top.

From Farmer's Home Journal of May 5, we note that Col. David Castleman of Clifton farm, near Louisville, has sold the 3-year-old saddle stallion "The Moor" No. 1907, to Gen. Wm. Palmer of Colorado Springs for $7,500.

"Another good sale of Kentucky saddle horses was made in New York this week. The consignment was from Shelby T. Harbison, of Lexington. The top price was $1,250 for the gelding, Little Acorn. Big Oak brought $1,025. The pair, Escort and Gallant, sold for $1,250. Ben Greet brought $700, Tolu $900 and Senator $700."

Also that "At Durand's New York Horse Show, in the saddle class, Patsie Palmer won first. She is by Chester Dare No. 10, fourth dam by Du-Jah." This saddle blood, in its highest perfection, is represented in this section of Kentucky by James M. Lang's horse Rebel Dare No. 1884, by the great Chester Dare, dam by a son of Red Squirrel, second dam by Duluth. Rebel Dare, while the highest bred horse, is also said to be the best saddle horse in Jackson's Purchase.

A Year of Blood.

The year 1903 will long be remembered in the home of F. N. Tackett, of Alliance, Ky., as a year of blood; which flowed so copiously from Mr. Tackett's lungs that death seemed very near. He writes: "Severe bleeding from the lungs and a frightful cough had brought me at death's door, when I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, with the astonishing result that after taking four bottles I was completely restored and as time has proven permanently cured." Guaranteed for sore lungs, coughs and colds, at McPherson's Drug Store. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Billy's Tenderfoot

By STEWART EDWARD WHITE

"There you are," she whispered, showing him the open window.

"Thank you," he stammered painfully. "I assure you—I wish!"

The girl laughed under her breath.

"That's all right," she said heartily.

"I owe you that for calling old whiskers off his bronc," and she kissed him.

The messenger, trembling with self-consciousness, climbed hastily through the window, ran the broad loop of the satchel up his arm and, instead of dropping to the ground, as the girl had expected, swung himself lightly into the branches of a rather large scrub oak that grew near. She listened to the rustle of the leaves for a moment as he neared the trunk and then, unable longer to restrain her curiosity in regard to the doings below, turned to the stairway.

As she did so two men mounted. They examined the rooms of the upper story hastily, but carefully, paying scant attention to her, and departed swearing. In a few moments they returned for the stranger's trunk. Neil followed as far as the stairway. There she heard and saw things, and fled in bitter dismay to the back of the house, when Billy Knapp was overpowered.

At the window she knelt, clasping her hands and placing her head between her bare arms. Women in the west, at least women like Neil, do not weep. But she came near it. Suddenly she raised her head. A voice near her ear had addressed her.

"Here, outside," came the low, guarded voice. "In the tree."

Then she saw that the little stranger had not stirred from his first sighting place.

"Beg your pardon, ma'am, for startling you or for addressing you at all, which I shouldn't, but—"

"Oh, never mind that," cried the girl impatiently, shaking back her hair. So deprecating and timid were the tones that, almost without an effort of the imagination, she could picture the little man's blushes and his half-sidling method of delivery. At this supreme moment his littleness and lack of self-assertion jarred on her mood. "What you doin' there? Thought you'd va-moose!"

"It was safest here," explained the stranger. "I left no trail."

She nodded comprehension of the common sense of this.

"But, ma'am, I took the liberty of speaking to you because you seem to be in trouble. Of course I ain't got no right to ask, an' if you don't care to tell me—"

"They're goin' to kill Billy!" broke in Neil with a sob.

"What for?"

"I don't jest rightly, make out. They're after some one, and they think Billy's catchin' him. I reckon it's you. Billy ain't catchin' nothin', but they think he is."

"It's me they're after all right enough. Now you know where I am, why don't you tell them an' save Billy?"

The girl started, but her keen western mind saw the difficulty at once.

"They think Billy protects you jest the same."

"Do you love him?" asked the stranger.

"God knows I'm purty tough," confessed Neil, sobbing, "but I jest do that!" And she dropped her head again.

The invisible stranger in the gloom fell silent, considering.

"I'm a purty rank proposition myself," said he at last as if to himself, "and I got a job on hand which same I oughta put through without givin' attention on anything else. As a usual play, folks don't care for me, and I don't care much for folks, women especial. They drives me plumb tired. I reckon I don't stack up very high on the line chips when it comes to cashin' in with that sex anyhow, but in general they gives me as much notice as they lavishes on a doodle bug. I ain't carin', you understand, nary bit, but once in a dog's age I kind of hankers for a decent look from one of them. I ain't never had no women folks of my own—never. Sometimes I thinks it would be some scrumptious to know a little gal's waitin' for me somewhere. They ain't none. They never will be. I ain't built that way. You treated me white tonight. You're the first woman that ever kissed me of her own accord."

The girl heard a faint scramble, then the soft pat of some one landing on his feet. Peering from the window, she made out a faint shadowy form stealing around the corner of the hotel. She put her hand to her heart and listened. Her understanding of the stranger's motives was vague, but she had caught his confession that her kiss had meant much to him and even in her anxiety she felt an inclination to laugh. She had bestowed that caress as she would have kissed the cold end of a dog's nose.

The men below stairs, after some discussion, had decided on bullet. This was out of consideration for Billy's standing as a frontiersman. Besides, he had stolen no horses. In order not to delay matters the execution was fixed for the present time and place.

Neil stood with his back to the logs of his own hotel, his hands and feet bound, but his eyes uncovered. He had never lost his nerve. In the short respite which preparation demanded he told his opponents what he thought of them.

"Proud!" he concluded a long solilo-quy as if to the reflector of the lamp. "Proud!" he repeated meditatively. "This yer Hank's jest that proud he's all swelled up like a poisoned pup. Ain't every one kin corral a man and get $50,000 without turnin' a hair?"

Black Hank distributed three men to do the business. There were no heroes. The execution of this man was necessary to him, not because he was particularly angry over the escape of the messenger—he expected to capture that individual in due time—but in order to preserve his authority over his men. He was in the act of moving back to give the shooters room when he heard the door open and shut.

He turned. Before the door stood a small, compact-looking man in a light check suit. The tenderfoot carried two short barreled Colt's revolvers, one of which he presented directly at Black Hank.

"Nds up!" he commanded sharply.

Hank was directly covered, so he obeyed. The newcomer's eye had a strangely restless quality. Of the other dozen inmates of the room eleven were firmly convinced that the weapon and eye not directed at their leader were personally concerned with themselves. The twelfth thought he saw his chance. To the bewildered onlookers there seemed to be a flash and a bang instantaneous. Then things were as before. One of the stranger's weapons still pointed at Black Hank's breast; the second at each one of the others. Only the twelfth man, he who had seen his chance, had collapsed forward to the floor. No one could assure himself positively that he had discerned the slightest motion on the part of the stranger.

"Now," said the latter sharply, "one at a time, gentlemen. Drop your gun!" This last to Black Hank. "Muzzle down. Drop it! Correct."

One of the men in the back of the room stirred slightly on the ball of his foot.

"Steady there!" said the stranger. The man stiffened.

"Next gent," went on the little man, subtly indicating another. The latter obeyed without hesitation. "Next! Now you. Now you in the corner."

One after another the pistols clashed to the floor. Not for an instant could a single inmate of the apartment, armed or unarmed, flatter himself that his slightest motion was overlooked. They were like tigers on the couch, ready to spring the moment the man's guard lowered. It did not lower. The huddled figure on the floor reminded them of what might happen. They obeyed.

"Step back!" commanded the stranger next. In a moment he had them standing in a row against the wall, rigid, upright, their hands over their heads. Then for the first time the stranger moved from his position by the door.

"Call her," he said to Billy—"the girl."

Billy raised his voice. "Neil! Oh, Neil!"

In a moment she appeared in the doorway at the foot of the stairs without hesitation or fear. She had slipped on a dress. When she perceived the state of affairs, she brightened almost mischievously.

"Would you just as soon, ma'am, if it ain't trouble you too much, just sort of naturally untie Billy?" requested the stranger.

She did so. The hotel keeper stretched out his arms.

"Now pick up your guns, please."

The two set about it.

"Where's that infernal old reprobat?" howled Billy suddenly, looking about for Charley.

The patriarch had quietly slipped away.

"You can drop them arms," advised the stranger, lowering the muzzles of his weapons. The leader started to say something.

"You shut up!" said Billy, selecting his own revolvers from the heap.

The stranger suddenly picked up one of the Colt's single action revolvers which lay on the floor and, holding the trigger back against the guard, exploded the six charges by hitting the hammer smartly with the palm of his hand. In the thrashing motion of this discharge he evidently had design, for the first six whizzed across on Billy's bar were shattered. It was wonderful work, rattling fire, quicker than a self-cooker even. He selected another weapon. From a pile of tomato cans he took one and tossed it into the air. Before it fell he had perforated it twice, and as it rolled along the floor he helped its progression by four more bullets which left streams of tomato juice where they had hit. The room was full of smoke. The group watched, fascinated.

Then the men against the wall grew rigid. Out of the film of smoke long, vivid streams flashed toward them, right and left, like the alternating steam of a locomotive's pistons. Smash, smash, smash, hit the bullets with regular thud. With the twelfth discharge the din ceased. Midway between the heads of each pair of men against the wall was a round hole. No one was touched.

A silence fell. The smoke lightened and blew slowly through the window and open door. The horses, long since deserted by their guardian in favor of the excitement within, whinnied. The stranger dropped the smoking Colts and quietly reproduced his own short barreled arms from his side pockets. Billy broke the spell at last.

"That's shootin'!" he observed, with a sigh.

"The fifty thousand is outside," said the stranger. "Do you want 'em?"

There was no reply.

"I aims to pull out on one of these here broncs of yours," said he. "Billy, he's all right. He doesn't know nothin' about me."

He collected the six shooters from the floor.

"I just takes these with me for a spell," he remarked. "You finds them, if you looks hard enough, along on the trail—like-wise your friends."

He backed toward the door.

"I'm layin' for the man that sticks his head outen that door," he warned.

"Stranger," called Black Hank as he neared the door.

The little man paused.

"Might I ask your name?"

"My name is Alfred," replied the latter.

Black Hank looked chagrined.

"I've heard tell of you," he remarked.

The stranger's eye ran over the room and encountered that of the girl. He shrank into himself and blushed.

"Good night," he said hastily and disappeared. A moment later the beat of hoofs became audible as he led the bunch of horses away.

For an instant no one spoke. Then Billy exclaimed, "Hank, I means to stand pat with you, but you let that kid alone or I plugs you!" Billy was the only man armed.

"Kid, huh?" grunted Hank. "Alfred a kid? I've heard tell of him."

"What have you heard?" inquired the girl.

"He's the plumb best scout on the southern trail and the best pistol shot in the west," replied Black Hank.

The year following Billy Knapp, Alfred and another man named Jim Buckley took across the hills the only wagon train that dared set out that summer.

How She Met Her Fate

(Original.)

Drinking tea—all of us married women—we fell to comparing notes as to how, when and where we first met our husbands. One had sung in a church choir with the man she married, another had met her fate at a dance in a barn, a third was the wife of one who had fallen in love with her at seeing her run across a back yard. The experiences were not especially startling, and we were growing tired of them when Mrs. Perkins, a meek little woman who had kept silent, was invited to give her first meeting with her husband.

"Oh, I always wanted to marry a clergyman," she said demurely.

"And did you?"

"It was this way: When I was a girl my father was engaged in mining in Colorado. Needing a housekeeper, he sent for me to go out to him. I traveled by rail as far as the car went, then by stage. The coach was full of passengers, and we all soon got acquainted—at least the others did, for the conventional life I had led was so different from that of the west that I sat mum as a church mouse. A young man in a white cravat sat directly opposite me."

"Your fate?" interrupted one of the listeners.

"He talked very well, and after a time many of the passengers were listening to him. He had just been graduated at a theological seminary and was going into the mountains to preach the gospel to the rough element that abounded there. A small, quiet-looking man beside me, with a soft voice, wouldn't say anything at first, but finally gave the clergyman some information concerning the class of people he would have to deal with, especially the 'toughs.'"

"Of course I couldn't but admire the man who had given up the comforts of the east to come to such a country to preach the gospel to such terrible people. He seemed glad to learn what he would have to meet and asked his former a great many questions. What impressed me in his favor was that he didn't seem at all appalled at the terrible prospect before him."

"While we were talking," Mrs. Perkins went on, "there was a report ahead and the coach suddenly stopped. A man whose face was covered with a bandanna handkerchief put his head in at the coach door and said, 'Hands up! I didn't know what to do, for such things were entirely new to me, but, seeing the other passengers put their hands on their heads, I did the same. The man at the door had a revolver in each hand, and I was in terror lest one of them might go off accidentally, for I never could stand firearms nor people who handled them carelessly.'"

"Just the one for a clergyman's wife," put in one of the women.

"Then he threw open the door and told us all to get out, which we did, still keeping our hands on our heads, and stood in a line. There was a masked man standing in the road pointing a pistol at the stage driver and another man, also masked, waiting near the coach door. The one who had opened the coach door took a sack out of his pocket and came down the line, taking our valuables and dropping them in the sack. I was standing—it was all I could do to keep from fainting—between the young clergyman and the small man who had sat beside me in the coach. I leaned a little against the former for support. The robber got halfway down the line when, finding that his pistols were in the way of his taking our watches and things, as well as holding the sack, put them in his holsters. He robbed the clergyman, then me, and coming to the man next me, found nothing."

"It's all in my boots," said the victim.

"The robber bent down to search the man's boots. It all happened so quick that I never knew how it did happen. I heard a crack right under my nose, and the robber fell on his face. In half a second there was another crack, and the robber looking up jumped and fell backward. The man who was being robbed had snatched a revolver from the man who robbed him and shot him in the back of the head. With the same weapon he shot the next robber through the heart and started after the third at the horses' heads, who ran into the bush beside the road. The next thing I remember was seeing the terrible man who had done all this killing dragging the body of the third robber out of the wood."

"Well, it turned out that the small man with the soft voice was the quick shooting deputy of Boulder. He was the most awful man in Colorado, only he was on the side of the law instead of the villains. He turned the bodies over and looked at their faces with no more qualms of conscience than if he had killed a fly. He seemed to know two of them and said they were beginners, as he had suspected from the first. He returned us our property, and we all got into the coach and drove on."

"Until we reached the next town the quick shooting deputy rode on the box with the driver. The clergyman, poor fellow, had a weak heart. He was very white, leaning back on the cushion, and I gave him a sniff at my smelling salts, which seemed to help him."

"What an exciting romance!" exclaimed several listeners at once.

"I wonder how you could have married even a minister in such a country," remarked one.

"I didn't," replied the lady demurely. "Didn't? Then whom did you marry?"

"The quick shooting deputy."

The Tears of Houssan

(Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.)
It was just past midnight in the great zoological gardens when one of the elephants who had been nodding in sleep suddenly opened his eyes to their wide extent and threw up his trunk and sucked in the air with a hissing sound. He looked down the long aisle past the cages of the lions and tigers with a steady stare, and when the figure of a man came into view the great beast uttered a crooning, cooing sound.

The man came swiftly but quietly forward, and the elephant encircled him with his trunk and showed extravagant signs of affection. The lions and the tigers rose up to stare through the bars of their cages at the intruder. Had he been a stranger their growls and roars would have brought the watchman in short order.

"Chanda, my dear beloved, I have come to talk with thee," whispered the man to the elephant as he stroked his trunk with caressing hand. "They said they would kick me if they found me about the place again, but I have risked that to talk with thee. I don't remember how long ago it was, Chanda, that I was brought here from Bombay to be thy keeper and thy master? Sixteen long years have passed since that day. We were good friends from the start. I treated thee well, and thou gavest me thy friendship. Sixteen long years, Chanda, hath we been good friends, and not one quarrel during that time. Thou hast been ailing, and I hath cured thee. I hath been ailing, and thou hath sympathized with me. Is it not so, dearly beloved?"

Chanda hugged the man and made a gurgling sound in his throat.

"And the other day, after sixteen years—after I have become an old man—after the unbroken period of friendship between us—the manager sent me away at a day's notice. It is true that I drank too much of the strong wine of the country, and that when Janviers of the lions made fun of me I drew my knife and would have stabbed him."

"Then they discharged me."

The elephant lifted the man clear of the ground with his trunk and swung him back and forth pendulum fashion. The lions and tigers got up again to look.

"I would not give place to any man, Chanda, but to Janviers least of all. He will be hard on thee. He will prod thee with the iron and beat thee with bars. He will be thy master instead of thy friend. For some other man thou might in time have a liking, but not for Janviers. It is four days since he took charge of thee. Hath he beaten thee yet? Methinks there is a fresh wound on his ear."

The elephant hung his head and rocked to and fro for a moment as if ashamed and humiliated.

"Dost want thy old friend and brother back, Chanda? Aye, thou dost, and there is a way. There is a way, and but one way. The watchmen are asleep and the beasts are quiet, but what I say I shall whisper in thy ear. Listen to the words of Houssan, beloved."

With hands smoothing and caressing the great flapping ear the trainer whispered away for three or four minutes, while Chanda stood so quiet that he seemed turned to stone. Then the whisperer drew back and raised his voice a little and asked:

"Wilt thou do it, old friend—wilt thou do it for thee and me?"

Again the elephant lifted the man with his trunk and swung him to and fro, and the sounds in his throat almost seemed to form words.

"Brave old Chanda," whispered Houssan as he patted the trunk. "Tis for thee and me, that we may be together for years more. Make no bungle over it. If 'twere some one else—some one who had not plotted against thy friend and brother—a broken arm or a few broken ribs might suffice, but with Janviers, no. Make sure, dearly beloved, that it goes beyond that, else you will see me no more. I have said what I have said and must go. If I were caught here I should be treated in a manner to humiliate me in thy sight. One more caress, beloved, and then I go. Tomorrow night I hope to sleep at thy feet again."

When the man had glided away like a ghost the elephant stood quietly for five minutes. There was mischief in his quietness. Then he began weaving to and fro and flinging his trunk about. There was menace in the action. There was no trumpeting; only a sound like the hissing of a great snake.

"I have heard that sound in the forests of India," said one of the tigers to himself, "and it always meant death to something."

When morning came Janviers came with it. It was for him to feed and water the great beast. He was in a surly, impatient mood, and he did not notice certain signs that would have told him much.

"Back with you, brute!" he shouted as he flourished the iron bar over Chanda and threatened to bring it down.

A trunk shot forth like a serpent and twined around him. He was lifted high up and given a fling, and when he landed on the stone floor a hundred feet away he no longer lived. The lions and tigers roared and roared and flung themselves against the bars, and the people came running and cried out in their alarm and horror.

That night, clothed in his uniform again and confinement on his face, Houssan slept again at the elephant's feet. As the soft tip of his trunk gave his cheek a good night kiss he caressed it and said:

"Twere well done, dearly beloved. It was for thee and for me, and may the gods of our fathers bless and strengthen our friendship to the last days of our lives."

PURSE SNATCHERS BUSY IN PADUCAH

Three Cases Reported to Police in Two Days.

Negro Boys, Whose Descriptions Are Known to Authorities, Guilty of Crimes.

HIDE NEAR STREET CORNERS

Two negro boys are being sought after by the police for purse snatching, and if they are caught will be summarily dealt with.

During the past several days purses have been snatched from women on the streets and it has become common. Last night Mrs. Sue Hodge, of Seventh street near Jefferson street was walking home when two boys jumped out from the alley next to Judge James Campbell's residence and snatched her purse. The purse contained less than $1 and some keys.

Later in the night a woman at Ninth and Monroe streets was relieved of her purse in the same way and in both cases negro boys did the work. The police have a description of the boys and will try to catch them.

Suspect Arrested.

Bartley Turley, colored, about 11 years old, was arrested this afternoon for the theft of a pair of shoes from the Klein shops on lower Broadway under the Richmond House, and the police think that he is one of the two boys wanted for purse snatching.

The boy is alleged to have snatched the shoes and run away, but the proprietor was too quick and caught him.
He was brought to the city hall by Officer Cross and pumped. He stated that he had a partner by the name of Dennis Riley, and that they both resided near Tenth and Caldwell streets.
The boy would talk little of the alleged thefts but the police think he can be identified as one of the purse snatchers. The matter will be thoroughly investigated by the police today.

RATE CONTROL

FAVORED BY PRESIDENT OF THE PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

Thoroughly in Accord With President On Bill—Denies Secret Relates Exist.

New York, May 21.—Pearson's Magazine for June contains an article by James Creelman in which is given an interview on railroad rates with President Cassatt of the Pennsylvania Railroad company. Mr. Cassatt said:

"I have for several years believed that the national government, through the interstate commerce commission, ought to be in a position to fix railroad rates whenever the rates established by the railroads themselves are found, after complaint and hearing, to be unreasonable; provided, of course, that there shall be the right of appeal to the courts.

"Experience has shown that closer relationship and mutuality of interests are necessary to prevent the covert and destructive warfare between American railroads which produced the secret rate and rebate system.

"It is only right, therefore, that the public should have the means of protection against even a remote danger suggested by the increased power developed by this wholesome, and from every sound standpoint necessary spirit of alliance.

"Let the government regulate us for my part and for my associates in the Pennsylvania Railroad company I am generally heartily in accord with the position taken by President Roosevelt and we have been all along. I told the president himself when he made his first recommendation on this subject to congress more than four years ago that I believed him to be in the right.

"But it is equally important that the American people should recognize the grave necessity for greater harmony of action and interest between the railroads of this richest and busiest country in the world.

"We have trampled out the secret rate and rebate system which was not only ruining the railroads, but also made equal and fair conditions of business impossible in America. The secret rate system can never be revived again unless the railroads are prevented, by unwise legislation, from maintaining such relations among themselves as will insure the maintenance of reasonable and stable rates."

CATERPILLARS

Hatched From Eggs of White Miller
On Leaves.

A discovery of interest to lovers of trees has been made by J. C. Cunningham, of 1308 Burnett avenue, this city. Mr. Cunningham has number of fine shade trees, which caterpillars have been injuring, as they have trees all over the city. Many people have wrapped their tree trunks at the bottom to prevent access by the worms, but according to Mr. Cunningham's discovery, this does no good, for the caterpillars are hatched on the leaves of the trees from the eggs of a white miller. Mr.
Cunningham has several groups of eggs under observation and he is closely studying the habits of the miller.
